

ALIENBEES—LIMITED-EDITION COLORS ▲

Paul C. Buff has introduced two limited-edition colors—Purple Haze and Navajo Turquoise—to his line of AlienBees strobes. Only 3,000 units of each color will be produced. Specs for these strobes are the same as their nonlimited-edition counterparts; however, they cost an additional $10 for the limited-edition colors. Should you decide to upgrade to a more powerful model within two years of your purchase, you can do so for $25 plus the price difference between models. The AlienBees B400 costs $234.95, the B800 goes for $289.05, and the B1600 runs $369.95.

TETHER TOOLS STRAPMOORE ◀

Ever wish you had an extra hand to hold something when you're on a shoot? Look no further than the Tether Tools StrapMoore. This handy accessory was designed to attach to a tripod or light stand and hold a laptop power-supply brick, but it can hold any number of things: small flashes, radio transmitters, phones, mobile Internet transmitters, external battery packs, and just about anything else you can throw at it. You can even get the StrapMoore Extender if you want to use it with larger items. StrapMoore costs $18.95, and the StrapMoore Extender will cost you an additional $11.95.

Full disclosure: This product is named after me (Brad Moore) because I asked Tether Tools to come up with a solution for a laptop power-supply problem I had, but I don't get any royalty or kickback from it. ■
